

The Cambodian Mission – the fight against the dog meat trade

This is an amazing story – check the link <https://thesoundofanimals.com>

The Organisation

The Sound of Animals trace its beginnings to over a decade ago when Michael Chour arrived in Buriram, Thailand and was immediately drawn to the dog meat trade that was still legal and in existence in Thailand at the time. Through the years, he became an advocate of the fight against dog consumption. When the dog meat trade was outlawed in Thailand, the dogs of the slaughterhouses in the area were released.

Fast forward to the present time ... about 500 dogs scattered over a 90-mile radius needing daily care. 2017 proved to be a turning point for The Sound of Animals with the building of Blue Dream shelter and the intention to establish a foundation so that the work of the last decade can carry on into the future with the same emphasis on care and love for the many ex-slaughterhouse survivors and their descendants and to continue the fight against the Dog Meat Trade in neighbouring Cambodia. Blue Dream shelter is a place where the dogs can finally be safe from abuse, accident and most importantly, from the Dog Meat Trade (being so close to the Thai/Cambodian border). The shelter will make it possible to treat and contain diseases and allow for a sterilisation plan to be executed. This will see the beginning of all donations being channelled into more work and rescue in the Dog Meat Trade in Cambodia, instead of feeding a growing population of strays and abandoned dogs. The Sound of Animals pledge to continue to provide for all the dogs in our care and to work to reduce the Dog Meat Trade in Cambodia and the region.

Blue Dream Shelter

In January of 2017 we started the first fundraiser to construct Blue Dream Shelter. It was in May of 2017 that the land was purchased and we could start using funds for the construction of the kennels, recovery unit, and other accommodations. With over 500 dogs that we care for Blue Dream Shelter will be the safe haven for our street dogs and the dogs we rescue from the Dog Meat Trade in Cambodia. At Blue Dream Shelter our goal is to give our animals the that life they deserve. No longer will our dogs wander the streets dodging cars or dangerous people, instead they will be safe and have a kennel that they can call home.

Once our dogs are living at the shelter this will give us an opportunity to execute a sterilization plan to get control of the ever-growing population. Since we can have the dogs stay in the recovery unit on shelter grounds this will decrease our vet bills and allow funds to be used towards our Cambodian Dog Meat Trade survivors and rescues.

Digger

International dog judge, Stanley Shen, who lives in Singapore, is one of the very few judges to join the combatants in their fight against the dog slaughterings and is active mainly in Cambodia.

He has a list of judges against the Asian dog meat trade. Since last year he has collected beads from all over the world (people send beads and buttons to him). He makes the most exquisite bracelets which he sells at USD 50 each - he sends all money collected to a group of people in Cambodia who rescue dogs from slaughter houses and work tirelessly to close them down. But he is stopping this fundraiser the end of April. He says he will start a different one. Try the link below. He spends many hours making these things. He is an amazing guy.
